LOGLINE

Stripped of her name and fortune overnight, fallen heiress Ivy March takes a job cleaning the penthouse of Damian Cross, the billionaire raider who dismantled her family in a single hostile week. She plans to clean everything: his floors, his safes, his secrets. But on her first night she finds her own photograph beside his bed -- taken before the fall -- and the man who ruined her family turns out to be at war with the woman who really did: Séverine Vale, his fiancée, secretly the widow of Ivy's father. Every seduction is a weapon on both sides, every rescue is mistaken for betrayal, and loving Damian may cost Ivy the empire, her mother, and her name -- while a hidden heir, an undercover investigator, and a compromised ex circle the one question that detonates at the midpoint: who really destroyed the March family?

CHARACTERS

IVY MARCH

Role: Fallen heiress, undercover cleaner, revenge-driven romantic protagonist.

Twenty-eight, heart-shaped face, dark green eyes, long black hair hidden in a severe knot. A gray cleaner's uniform conceals vintage silk slips; a pale signet scar circles one finger. She evolves from disguised spy to secret lover, exposed heir, public fugitive, and finally a ruler willing to share power rather than inherit cruelty.

DAMIAN CROSS

Role: Billionaire raider, forbidden lover, apparent destroyer, concealed protector.

Thirty-four, angular face, silver-gray eyes; immaculate charcoal suits by day, open white shirts during sleepless nights. He completed the hostile takeover to keep Séverine from owning March outright -- knowing Ivy would hate him. He would rather be despised than explain a vulnerable choice, and surrenders his empire rather than command Ivy's future.

SÉVERINE VALE

Role: Jealous fiancée, secret widow, board queen, and primary antagonist.

Thirty-two, sculpted cheekbones, pale blond bob, white couture and blood-red nails. She secretly married Victor March and orchestrated his empire's collapse to inherit it through widowhood. She needs Damian to choose her freely -- so she repeatedly delays certain victory to manufacture love, and falls the moment possession fails.

JULIAN CROSS

Role: Damian's charming younger brother, rival claimant, unstable ally.

Thirty, tousled hair, jewel-toned suits, a vintage March watch worn inside the wrist. Victor March's hidden son -- a blood claim that can split Ivy's inheritance, and the season's final unanswered condition.

MARA MARCH

Role: Ivy's institutionalized mother, buried witness, keeper of the family truth.

Fifty-eight, silver-streaked hair, an old emerald March robe over institutional cream. She staged part of her breakdown to survive Séverine's surveillance -- and her final truth costs her everything.

LENA ORTIZ

Role: Damian's chief of staff -- and an undercover financial-crimes investigator.

Thirty-eight, sharp black bob, navy trouser suits, a silver pen clipped perfectly straight. Loyal to systems over people, until justice without mercy starts to look like Séverine's kind of control.

NOAH PRICE

Role: Ivy's former fiancé, society journalist, compromised betrayer, doomed redemption seeker.

Thirty-one, rumpled tuxedos, loosened bow ties, an old press notebook. Blackmailed into abandoning Ivy, paid to betray her again -- and finally brave exactly once, at the full price.
